UNCOVERING THE STORIES OF OUR COMMUNITIES – OVER 100 PARTNER EVENTS PLANNED FOR THE SINGAPORE BICENTENNIAL

Singapore, 27 February 2019 – The Singapore Bicentennial is an opportunity for Singaporeans to find personal connections to the past, and discover more about our longer history by piecing together the stories of our shared journey. Together with over 280 partners, including community groups, religious institutions, clans, associations, businesses, schools, social organisations, and government agencies, over 100 ground-up events and projects have been initiated across the Bicentennial year to uncover these stories of our past.

Many partners of the Singapore Bicentennial are long-established organisations and institutions in Singapore. For instance, the Nagore Dargah Indian Muslim Heritage Centre, which has over 180 years of history, is curating a photo exhibition featuring personal photographs of 100 Singaporeans matched with old black and white photographs of their ancestors who first came to Singapore in the early years.

Another Singapore Bicentennial partner is the Goh Loo Club, established in 1907. Together with the Tan Kah Kee Foundation, the club has lined up a series of cultural seminars by academics on topics dating back to the early 1800s, including tracing the historical development of Chinese clan associations from colonial years, and how globalisation has affected Singapore's economic fortunes.

The Eurasian Association is also marking its centenary this year, and has planned a slate of activities to celebrate and share more about how its history is intertwined with its contributions to the community and nation. These include the Eurasian Festival, a revamp of the Eurasian Heritage Gallery, and a publication documenting the history and contributions of the organisation.

To promote the history, learning and writing of the Jawi script, Perikatan Tulisan Jawi Singapura (loosely translated as the Singapore Jawi Writing Association) is collaborating with Cultural Medallion recipient Isa Kamari to release the Jawi version of his existing novel, "Duka Tuan Bertakhta", to mark the Singapore Bicentennial. This is part of the efforts to revive the usage, learning and understanding of Jawi calligraphy. The book launch will be followed by a seminar of literary discussions pertaining to Jawi manuscripts.

Singaporeans can also look forward to learning more about the longer history of Singapore at five roadshows taking place island-wide. A collaboration between the five Community Development Councils (CDC) and the Singapore Bicentennial Office (SBO), the Bicentennial roadshows will kick off in April in the Southeast District, followed by the other four districts in subsequent months. The roadshows provide an interactive experience of Singapore's 700-year history, charting our transformation from a place with a geographical location to a nation and people with a unique Singaporean DNA.

Complementing these roadshows are a series of ground-up projects supported by the People's Association. These feature the place histories of the different regions, their landmarks, communities and customs. For example, participants in heritage walks around Choa Chu Kang GRC and Hong Kah North SMC will glean fascinating historical facts about the estate, including how the last wild tiger in Singapore was found in Choa Chu Kang in the 1930s.

Minister Josephine Teo, Co-chairman of the Ministerial Steering Committee for the Singapore Bicentennial said, "The Singapore Bicentennial is an opportunity to reflect on our past to draw lessons for the future. We are grateful that many people and communities have stepped forward to share their history through various projects and events. All these contribute to the weaving together of a textured tapestry of Singapore's long history, with meaningful activities that everyone can take part in."

Minister Josephine Teo also added, "Throughout our history, many individuals and communities gave back to society in various ways – by building places of worship, hospitals, schools, and more. The pioneers of independent Singapore too found ways to contribute, be it through monetary donations or voluntary service. By setting up the Bicentennial Community Fund, we hope to inspire more corporates and individuals to care and share, in the same spirit of our forefathers' generosity."

About the Singapore Bicentennial

The Singapore Bicentennial marks the 200th anniversary of the arrival of Stamford Raffles in Singapore, one of the key turning points in our history. But our story didn't start in 1819 – it started 700 years ago. The Singapore Bicentennial is an occasion for us to reflect on this history, before and after 1819; to understand our journey from a place with a geographically strategic location, to a people with a unique Singaporean DNA. This commemoration features a huge cast of contributors, as well as the regional and global developments that have influenced our place in the world, our lives and identities. For more information, visit our website (www.bicentennial.sg) or the Singapore Bicentennial Facebook page (www.facebook.com/sqbicentennial).

About the Singapore Bicentennial Office

Part of the Prime Minister's Office, the Singapore Bicentennial Office (SBO) is committed to coordinating a nationwide commemoration that incorporates partner agencies and various community groups in programmes that contribute to a shared reflection and appreciation of Singapore's longer history. SBO is guided by an Advisory Panel comprising historians, archaeologists and community leaders, and supported by a diverse group of volunteers in this ground-up initiative.

Beyond events, SBO collaborates with many longstanding religious and educational institutions, associations and clans, as well as businesses and individuals, to provide research and resource support, even as we make plans to release a range of diverse projects and products. We hope that this will generate interest and spark reflection on our rich cultural heritage.

23 Feb to 2 Mar	9am to 12pm	Rochor * Meeting point and tour route will be provided upon confirmation.		Yale-NUS College	There Was a Road Here	The shape of a walking route can reveal the heterogeneity of a neighbourhood and debunk official histories or state-endorsed historical narratives that gloss over nuances. With the aid of old and new street maps, participants will come to understand how 'mapping' is a cultural activity that reveals or conceals complexity. Participants will be given tips on 'reading' maps and buildings in the urban landscape. The route will straddle neighbourhoods of historical significance that lie between Serangoon Road and Beach Road. This walk is an attempt to retrace fragmented urban parcels and reclaim lost narratives.
27 Feb	7:30 to 8:30pm	The Arts House, Blue Room		Yale-NUS College	Alternate Pasts: Politics of Commemoration of 1915	This talk will feature the year 1915, an under-appreciated milestone nearly a century after Singapore became a British settlement. The Sepoy Mutiny in Singapore in February 1915 coalesced myriad anxieties associated with being a well-connected port-city that formed the nexus of several networks – religious, military, transportation and commercial. The Mutiny, it turned out, was the first time that British authorities in the colony including those without any military training went through the experience of

						being mobilised for the colony, thus forging complicated bonds between different population sectors at a tense moment when power structures were violently upended. A heavy reliance on neighbouring forces cemented Singapore's vulnerability because they were not part of formal wartime strategy. I argue that ad-hoc arrangements were indeed a deliberate strategy of war, and that Singapore embodied this calculated neglect. Dr. Nurfadzilah Yahaya is Assistant Professor of History at the National University of Singapore. She specialises in legal history, history of the Indian Ocean and Southeast Asia. Her forthcoming book, Fluid Jurisdictions of Arab Diaspora under Colonial Rule in Southeast Asia will be published by Cornell University Press.
February	28 Feb	7 to 9pm	The Projector, Blue Room	Yale-NUS College	Reimagining Histories   People Power Bombshell: The Diary of Vietnam Rose	In 1986, The Diary of Vietnam Rose was shot on the island of Luzon by legendary director Celso Castillo, starring Liz Alindogan, leading lady of 'sexy' films. An attempt to make a political film at a time when the Marcos regime was collapsing and Oliver Stone was around the corner shooting Platoon; it was never completed. Decades later, artist-filmmaker John Torres brings it back to life, combining the un-restored footage,

						beautifully ravaged by decay, with new material. The original cast and crew then 'redub' the images, overlaying their spoken memories and stories, as histories and fictions, filmmaking and revolutions collide. — REIMAGINING HISTORIES This short season of films presents four feature-length 'documentaries' that interrogate specific national histories, from Ireland, USA, Cambodia and the Philippines. Using various strategies, many of which reinvent our notions of documentary, each of these films explores how histories (and films) are lost and recovered, how personal stories intermingle with national events, and how fictions often reveal greater truths than any official set of facts.
March	1 Mar	6:30 to 9:30pm	Centre 42	Yale-NUS College	Boka di Stori Graphic Novel - Book Launch & Eurasian Writers' Panel	Join the Boka di Stori team for the launch of Ki Sorti, the first graphic novel in Singapore about local Eurasian history, culture and identity. It follows Alex and Patricia, a mother and daughter who reconnect with their Eurasian roots at the funeral of a beloved relative, Minnie. 'Boka di Stori' is a Kristang phrase which literally translates to 'Mouth of Stories', but also means 'Storyteller'. This

						graphic novel hence celebrates the community's elderly members — the true storytellers whose personal accounts the narrative was inspired by. The book launch will present an in-depth look into these previously untold stories, and insights into the writing process. It will be followed by a Eurasian Writers' Panel featuring authors Melissa De Silva (Others Is Not a Race) and Kevin Martens Wong (Altered Straits), performance poet Charlene Shepherdson (In the Twine: A Tapestry of Stories), emerging scriptwriter and director Victoria Scully (Nina Boboi) and Boka di Stori's own Shane Carroll. Join us for an intimate conversation on their experiences being Eurasian in Singapore, and how the community can shape new narratives and navigate its own fluid identity within Singapore's racial landscape.
	1 to 10 Mar	3pm (3 and 10 Mar)  7:30pm (1 to 3 Mar, 6 to 10 Mar)	300 Jalan Bukit Ho Swee	Yale-NUS College	First Storeys  Theatrical Installation, two Panel discussions, one workshop	First Storeys interrogates the “kampung to metropolis” narrative, focusing on the period of large scale resettlement in Singapore from the 1950s to the 1990s. Through a speculative theatrical installation, the piece will surface lesser known stories surrounding the process of resettlement.
